I love Peter Hoeg, who writes these odd, distinct, and incredibly memorable characters. I discovered Borderliners after reading Hoeg's mainstream hit Smilla's Sense of Snow, and it's a gorgeous book -- at times a slightly dense and difficult read, but it's ultimately become one of my all-time favorites.

Borderliners Summary - eNotes.com

Peter Høeg published his first novel, A History of Danish Dreams, in 1988 to very positive reviews. He decided at that stage to protect his personal life. [2] Over the next five years he wrote and published the short story collection Tales of Night , and the novels: Miss Smilla's Feeling for Snow (1992), Borderliners (1993).

Peter Høeg - Wikipedia

Peter Høeg is the English translation of De måske egnede, a novel written by Danish author Peter Høeg in 1993. It is about three children – Peter, Katerina, and August – who attend a private school in Copenhagen in the mid 1970s. It is not long before the children realise they are part of an experiment initiated by the school.

Peter, Katarina and August are borderliners. That is, they are under assessment by the authorities to determine their futures. Will they win the right to be integrated with other, 'normal', children (normal in the opinion of the authorities) - or will they spend the rest of their lives in institutions? But these children are alert to their situation.

Borderliners - Wikipedia

Borderliners is a dark, semiautobiographical novel about Peter, a 13-year-old boy attending a boarding school for troubled students in Copenhagen. In a dreary atmosphere of hopelessness, strictly enforced regulations and corporal punishments, Peter befriends two very opposite fellow students: the older, sophisticated loner Katarina and a timid little boy named August.
