To start a food truck business, you'll obviously need a truck!

Now, if you're someone who's on a prior small budget, you might want to consider a food truck. This way you can always upgrade later and start small instead.

Food carts are cheaper in comparison to trucks and are great for beginners.

In 2015, the U.S. food truck industry brought in $856.7 million. By 2020, that number is expected to flirt with $1 billion as food trucks increasingly open up shop all over the country—in places like Portland, Austin, Seattle, San Francisco, New York City, and everywhere in between.. Suffice it to say that now is a great time to start your own food truck business.
