The Philosophy of Hannibal. ... The specifics of his theology are unclear, in the novel Hannibal we find this quote "Hannibal Lecter had not been bothered by any considerations of deity, other than to recognize how his own modest predations paled beside those of God." This is similar to the discussion of "typhoid and swans" found both in the ...

"There could be no objection to homicidal art as art. One could certainly object that an artwork made out of dead bodies is immoral, but from a purely aesthetic point of view, it could still be a rewarding aesthetic experience and hence a great work of art. (From the book Hannibal Lecter & Philosophy: The Heart Of The Matter)"

~~Hannibal Lecter — Wikipedia~~

Lecter is intrigued by the concept of death in many forms, both in reality and in philosophy. While this quote could seem benign coming from someone else, from Lecter's lips it takes on a sinister note. Death obviously drives Hannibal in some type of way, and his view of what makes him great is a twisted one.
