In a way, God was the help or helper because he made Eve, and yet the text says that Eve was a "suitable" (equal and compatible) helper for Adam. The Hebrew word kenegdo (really a prepositional phrase) makes is fairly clear that Eve was neither inferior nor superior, and that she was a helper or help to the first human.

I made a hasty decision to buy this book based on the title and a friend's recommendation, because I was looking for "help for the helper." Unfortunately, it turns out to be heavy on the psychophysiology of trauma and attachment--which I'm already familiar with--and light on the help. If you're looking for a readable review of the science, you ...
